Introduction

According to customer feedback and internal evaluations, this report outlines several ways to improve the website of Global Champions Reps, whose slogan is "Next Level Players." As a company based in London, England, specializing in the representation of high-performance athletes, our website should communicate professionalism and excellence.

Point 1: Problems with the Old Website

As can be seen from recent user comments, the current website does not clearly present our services or athlete profiles. In addition, the design appears outdated and some important information is difficult to locate. Consequently, potential clients and sponsors may leave the website without understanding the full range of services we offer.

Point 2: Layout of the New Website

The new website should feature a modern and attractive design with clear navigation menus. The homepage should highlight our slogan, athlete achievements, and company mission. Furthermore, the website should be fully responsive to ensure easy access from mobile devices.

Point 3: Information Needed on the New Website

The website should include detailed athlete profiles, sponsorship opportunities, success stories, company services, and updated news. It is also important to provide visible contact information and details about our London headquarters.

Recommendations and Conclusion

The data suggest that a more user-friendly and informative website would strengthen the company's image. Therefore, it is recommended that Global Champions Reps redesign its website to improve communication, attract new athletes and sponsors, and support future business growth.
